The Toyohari Foundation Program is taught by teacher-practitioners who are all practicing Toyohari in their acupuncture clinics in Australia and New Zealand. Our teachers have had extensive Toyohari training in Australasia and Japan by renowned teachers within the Toyohari lineage of acupuncture. All hands on training is done face-to-face and lectures will be accessed via weblink in the month before the practical weekends and delivered by renowned author, practitioner and academic, Stephen Birch, and Marian Fixler, UK based Toyohari practitioner.

If you are interested in learning Japanese meridian therapy, now is the time to seize this rare opportunity.

About Toyohari

Toyohari is a complete system of Japanese Meridian Therapy steeped deeply in the Chinese medical Classics. Toyohari techniques involve the use of gold, silver and steel needles, direct moxibustion, polarity devices, cupping and microbleeding as well as special tools based on the nine classical needles.

The Toyohari Association was founded by blind acupuncturist Kodo Fukushima in 1959. Today worldwide more than 2000 practitioners, both blind and sighted, practice the Toyohari style, which continues to evolve and develop. This Foundation Program is approved by the Toyohari Medical Association, Japan. It teaches Toyohari style meridian therapy over twenty-one days in seven, three--day sessions.

Within the course, unique group practice methods help to rapidly increase the practitioners ability to feel and influence Qi, enabling to diagnose and treat even difficult cases. The practitioner will learn six position comparative pulse diagnosis and the use of effective feedback methods such as abdominal, meridian and pulse palpation. The traditional style of teaching and learning encourages deep exploration of what it means to be an acupuncturist and how to balance Qi, Blood, Yin and Yang using the Five Phase system.

The study and practice of Toyohari will refine the practitioner and engender confidence. It offers the opportunity to be part of an association that provides ongoing mentorship and training fostering continuous improvement.

The Program is open to all registered acupuncturists and final year students of acupuncture/ Chinese medicine.
